Deep Ocean Water

DOHAWAII identified deep ocean water as a valuable commodity and designed unique, mobile and modular equipment to harvest it offshore. Untouched by the toxic environment of our earth's surface and elevated from several hundred meters depth, this remarkably pure resource represents the healthiest source of water today. Never exposed to industrial pollution, agricultural runoff or human pathogens, Deep Ocean Water adds outstanding value to end products within a crowded marketplace.

We are the only purveyor and marketer of Hawaiian Deep Ocean Water to commercial customers and governments, globally, who are interested in utilizing this unique water as an ingredient in their manufacturing and packaging processes.

Our Technology

DOHAWAII's proprietary and highly sophisticated deep ocean water harvesting process (patent pending) is modular, scalable, and designed for international flexibility. Optimized for use on any vessel capable of carrying standard 20 and 40 foot cargo containers, the process includes all equipment necessary for harvesting, desalination and containerization of this unique product in amounts up to 500,000 gallons per day. We are confident that this is the first time independent system components have been integrated in such a manner.

Our Product

After the Deep Ocean Water, harvested 4 miles west of Oahu Hawaii, has been desalinated, it is filled into flexible tanks with a capacity of 5,200 gallons (20,000 liters) each. Each flexitank is placed within a standard ISO 20 cargo container to provide internationally standard shipping options to include sea, rail and truck.

Our customers

Food & Beverage - Health & Beauty

Since 1997, growing interest within the bottled water industry developed deep ocean water into an established segment; however, deep ocean water in commercial amounts for other product areas was unavailable. Now DOHAWAII can provide this unique commodity to enhance any product using water as a primary ingredient. Whether beer, juice, sauce, or canned tuna... or creams and lotions for skin care and cosmetics....

now, the basic ingredient, water, can make the difference.
